LABELLING OF THE PLANTS AT THE "JARDIN BOTANIQUE DU PÈRE DELAVAY" (BOTANICAL GARDEN)

Named after a botanist from Les Gets whose research in China over 150 years ago, contributed to the discovery of new plant species. His life's work allowed him to send 200,000 plants to the Natural History Museum in Paris, 1,800 of which were unknown at the time. The name "Delavay" has since been attributed to numerous plants: Rhododendron, Incarvillea (Incarillae Delavayi), Aster, Osmanthus, Paeonia (peony, Paeonia Delavayi), Osmanthus, Magnolia Delavayi...

As a tribute to his work and discoveries, a botanical garden was created in the natural setting of the Lac des Ecoles. It is open to the public and is an opportunity to go for a walk, learn about the various plants, and awaken the senses, for a unique learning experience.

The particularity and dynamism of this collection of plants found in the garden led to its labelling by the CCVS ( the French National Council for the Conservation of Plants and Gardens ) ; an exceptional recognition of intangible cultural heritage.

LESGETS.COM GETS A MAKEOVER

A few months ago, motivated by the desire to work more closely together, Les Gets Tourisme and La Sagets decided to give the lesgets.com destination website a complete makeover. They worked together with the shared goal of meeting the ever-changing needs of the website users, and to be able to produce a wider range of content, needed to improve reach and commercialisation. Following an audit of the existing website, a list of requirements was drafted by the project team, and a call for tender was launched. Once the web agency was chosen, the overhaul of the website began in December 2019.

The new website for the destination will be ready to launch in spring 2020. It will be upgradeable, with a simple, quick and efficient navigation, on both a desktop computer and a mobile phone. It will include a wide range of travel and tourism advice, and will be of great benefit to the professionals of the industry.
